Funeral of Mrs. Jerome Leavitt.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jerome Leavitt, whose sudden death we announced last week, took place from the family residence last Thursday forenoon. The house was filled with sympathizing friends who had assembled to pay their last tribute to the memory of true worth and express their sympathy for the bereaved relatives. Rev. R. M. Thompson officiated, delivering a very impressive and appropriate discourse from the text, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Those present were deeply impressed by the remarks made. They were words of comfort, not only to the grief-stricken and sorrowing relatives, but to all present. In closing his remarks Mr. Thompson paid a deserving tribute to the character of the deceased, as wife, mother and friend, in each of which relations her life had been an exemplary one. As a wife she had ever been a true helpmate, sympathizing with and consoling her partner in all the troubles and trials of life, rejoicing with him in his joys and sorrowing with him in his sorrows; making home the perfect home so often pictured but seldom realized. As a mother, fond and affectionate, judicious in counsel, realizing that character was formed in directing and moulding the plastic mind, and in this she was successful in a great degree. As a friend ever true and faithful, allowing her actions to speak rather than words or professions, and scores she had befriended mourn her departure with sincere grief, feeling that they have indeed lost a friend, and a wide circle of friends realize that death has made a breach in their ranks that will be hard to fill.

Everything was done that loving hearts and willing hands could do, to show the love and respect had for the departed, and to rob death and the grave of much of their dread and gloom. Beautiful flowers and fragrant evergreens were there in abundance, tastefully displayed. The grave was deprived of much of its coldness by being lined with evergreens. The remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of friends, and though in the grave, lost to sight, her memory will always remain fresh in the minds of all who enjoyed her friendship in this life.

The question has been referred to the Attorney General, who is expected to sustain the ruling of the secretary.
